"LISZT Consolation S.172 Nr. 1," performed by French pianist Blandine Waldmann, is a recording that deserves to be shared for its authenticity and emotional clarity, without excess. Rather than succumbing to the temptation of overly romanticizing Liszt or seeking gratuitous virtuosity, Waldmann chooses the path of introspection, emphasizing the piece's delicacy and meditative character. Her performance reveals dynamic control, well-breathed pauses, and a remarkable respect for melodic architecture, maintaining the focus on the contemplative essence proposed by Liszt. This sincere and careful approach makes the track resonate with both those already familiar with the composer and those just beginning to explore classical music—which is why we decided to feature it in our programming.

Stay in the flow!
